[Introductory music and birds chirping which fades into the background and continues to play as the podcast host begins to speak.]

ANTHONY MAZZUCCO: Greetings everyone! Welcome to “Three Sources of Light”, a new podcast produced by Carlsbad Caverns National Park. My name is Anthony Mazzucco and I am Park Guide for the National Park Service here in New Mexico. The Interpretation Division at Carlsbad Caverns has been diligently working to highlight what makes our park unique and share those stories with you online.

Future podcasts released through this channel will be a mix of interpretive storytelling, group discussions, and interviews with National Park Service staff, volunteers, and partner organizations. My colleagues are eager to share their knowledge and shed some light on a variety of topics, including Carlsbad Caverns’ elaborate cave system, biodiversity within the Chihuahuan Desert, cultural stories about explorers of decades past, the astronomy of a dark sky, and recreational opportunities for your next in-person visit. Our first full-length episode will be released on February 7th, 2021! For more information about Carlsbad Caverns National Park, please visit our website www.nps.gov/cave.

Until next time, from 750 feet (228 meters) below the surface, signing off air.
